

THE DOGS GROWING TIRED.

INCREASED INTEREST IN THE SHOW.

FINAL AWARDS MADE BY THE JUDGES—SOME OF THE VISITORS YESTERDAY.

A pretty man, said to resemble Roswell P. Flower, Governor of New York, passed down the aisle on the south side of Madison square garden at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and found most of the dogs tired and sleeping. When he reached the benches occupied by the judges, who slept with one eye and one ear open, he gave vent to an exclamation familiar to the historians of this epoch and to the politicians at Albany. In a bold voice he exclaimed:

"Rats!"

The situation caused may not have been so great as the occasion by Mr. Flower's remark at Albany, but it was quite satisfactory to the party man. Every terror awoke with a start and opened a clamor that rapidly filled the garden. The blazer took up the refrain, and the din was simply

WITH THE BUILDINGS.

Some people have been bitten owing to their own foolishness, but they have kept their own counsel. A handsome young woman of unbounded courage went up to old Harper and made the little speech: "You nasty, ugly old brute! I don't like you a bit; you mean thing!"

She emphasized these remarks with her taper finger, and the famous old brute made a vicious snap that took off the end of her sleeve. She has not spoken to a dog in the show since. A dandy approached a fox and a party of Englishmen, headed by Sir Walter Gifford and J. P. Russell-Howard, of Bexley House, Oxford, visited the dogs, and were greatly pleased with the exhibition of pointers and setters, though they did not think the classes were extraordinary in quality.

THE DERELICTS' TRACK.

WRECK CHART OF THE HYDROGRAPHIC OFFICE.

INTERESTING RECORD OF THE WANDERINGS OF ABANDONED HULKS.

Washington, Feb. 21.—The Hydrographic Office is compiling a wreck chart, which will show the drift of derelicts in the North Atlantic Ocean during the five years from 1887 to 1891, inclusive. It is the first time in the history of the office that such a chart has been prepared, and it will be of great value to shippers in showing the direction wrecks have been taken since the vessels were lost and the general tendency of all of them to drift in a northeasterly direction across the track of European steamers.

The greater number of wrecks have occurred along the New-England coast and in vicinity of Cape Hatteras, while along the New-Jersey and Virginia coasts the chart is dotted with marks indicating hundreds of derelicts floating in the path of coastwise traffic and a constant menace to shipping bound up and down the Atlantic. Around the Bermuda there are a dozen floating steamers and abandoned directly in the line of commerce from the Cape of Good Hope and South American ports, and which show little tendency to move more than a few hundred miles a year.

Off the Florida coast, which, years ago, was regarded as the most dangerous with the exception of Hatteras, fewer wrecks have occurred than formerly, due in a great measure to the excellent light system which has been provided in late years. Twenty years ago there were as many wrecks off this coast as there are now, and the drift of the derelicts was more rapid. It is as well a berth as the weather and circumstances would permit.

The island of Maricao is almost surrounded by derelicts of all sorts, which have clung tenaciously to that vicinity since the great cyclone a few years ago, which wrecked every vessel in the harbor and threw many of them high and dry on the shore. About twenty miles off Hatteras there are no less than fifty vessels floating bottom up, and it is exceedingly difficult for mariners to see them except on a very clear day, before they are close aboard and often too late to change their course to avoid them. Off the Maine shore and around Nova Scotia derelicts are thick, and in Martha's Vineyard and around Massachusetts the already large list is being constantly increased by the loss of schooners and occasionally a steamer.

The chart shows by dotted lines the tendency of all wrecks along the Atlantic coast as far south as Florida to be in a northeasterly direction and toward the Gulf Stream. When once a derelict gets in the warm waters of the stream it generally drifts lazily along northerly and then nearly due east until many miles of them, if they remain intact, bring up on the shore of Ireland or in the sea north of Scotland.

The annual annual sale of tax licenses by L. & W. Rockefeller, showed that so many prizes at the Westminster Kennel Club show will take place this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at the American Horse Exchange, No. 1,044 Broadway. Thirty-one dogs and thirty-two bitches will be sold by the firm without reserve.

These dogs were advertised to be on exhibition at the Horse Exchange all day yesterday, but owing to the delay in travel caused by the storm, they did not reach there until late yesterday afternoon. The sale will be held as advertised, however, this afternoon. The dogs will be exhibited by the firm.

THE CORNELL NAVY.

CANDIDATES FOR THE CREW WHICH IS TO ROW AT CHICAGO.

THEIR MERITS AND DEFECTS AS OARSMEN—THE LONG WINTER LEAVES TOO LITTLE TIME FOR PRACTICE ON THE INLET.

—THE FRESHMAN CREW.

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb. 23 (Special).—The acceptance of the invitation from the Chicago Navy by the Cambridge University crew of England to row at the World's Fair regatta was undoubtedly due to the extensive correspondence between Commodore Hagerman, of Cornell, and Cambridge University since early last summer.

As Cornell will also row in the same regatta, it will be interesting to know of the condition as well as the final makeup of the university crew. The well-known oarsman, Charles E. Courtney, who has had charge of the crew since 1883, is again at his post. The candidates for the university crew, with their weights, heights and ages are as follows:

Name	Weight	Height	Age
H. Hall, Jr.	170	5' 8"	24
E. G. Gilson	160	5' 10"	23
E. G. Gilson	160	5' 10"	23
